▶ SEE YOU SOON!

Issue 9 — 17th January 2013

Dear Ladies and Gentlemen,

We wish you the very best for 2013. Indeed, an active year awaits us. A number of events will provide us with opportunities to meet and share news, make new contacts, and advance offshore wind energy – even if this is not an easy task and the industry can't quite breathe a sigh of relief because some open questions are still unresolved. In this issue we'll focus first on upcoming deadlines for speakers and sponsors. And we'd like to warmly recommend a brand-new event to bridge the time until June 2013. We'll tell you here what's behind WINDFORCE Baltic Sea.

After we had to mark some time in 2012, we are now viewing 2013 with optimism and expect that policy makers will take the urgently needed steps we have called for so often.

We are looking to meeting you at the WINDFORCE events this year and are already anticipating WINDFORCE 2014 as well. This newsletter will inform you about upcoming events, special terms and the deadlines for registering. On towards an exciting and successful offshore year!

1. WINDFORCE Baltic Sea: Stockholm is expecting us – and you too!

The "WINDFORCE season" is off to a start in February. You are cordially invited to come to Stockholm for the WINDFORCE Baltic Sea event. Held for the first time on 20 and 21 February 2013, it will look closely at the development and challenges of the offshore industry in and around the Baltic Sea. Well-known businesses and association representatives will be there to give us insight into the current situation and an outlook on expected developments. In future, WINDFORCE Baltic Sea will be held annually, taking place in a different country bordering the Baltic each time.

To see the detailed programme and more information on registration options, please go to www.windforcebalticsea.com

2. WINDFORCE 2013 Make sure to take advantage of early booking rates now!

The most established offshore wind conference is not very far off. The industry will meet again at WINDFORCE in Bremerhaven, the "home port" for Germany's offshore wind industry. For three days, from 4 to 6 June 2013, speakers and participants from home and abroad will talk extensively in presentations and panel discussions about the continuing development of renewable power generation at sea. Participants are also invited to see "live" what offshore energy looks like today. The conference programme is offering an all-day tour to wind farms in the North Sea on 7 June.

You will find more information on the programme at www.windforce2013.com Regularly checking the website is worth it – we will activate the registration form very shortly. And being quick has its rewards – the early booking discount is guaranteed until 28 February 2013.
